non-static method return a static class in Java In Java how can we have a non-static method return a static class? class StaticClass { public static void aMethod() { return; } } class OuterClass { public void aMethod() { StaticClass.aMethod(); } } This fails with the message cannot return value from a static method in a non-static context Is there any other way to achieve this? A: You can make a getter method on StaticClass that returns the instance itself. Then, return that method on your instance. For example class OuterClass { public void aMethod() { StaticClass.aMethod(); } public static StaticClass getStaticClass() { return StaticClass.instance(); } } A: A getter is the correct way to do this. class OuterClass { public void aMethod() { StaticClass.aMethod(); } public StaticClass getStatic 6d1f23a050
