Despre oameni si melci (2012) no-banners.Q: Rails using rails (in a model) - using namespace in a scope I have a table which has a status field and want to return a list of the last dates where the status changed to test. In one of my models, I have a scope: `def self.last_test_date where.not(status: 'test')` end And I want to call this from a scope in another model. `class Calf { where.not(status: 'test') }` end I can call this fine from a view in the browser, but when I try and call from a scope in a model, I get the error 'undefined method `where' for #<Calf>'. What am I doing wrong? A: `self.where` is scope's method. `class Calf { where.not(status: 'test') }` end The context object is calf, but calf doesn't have where method. To use `self.where` in scope you need to monkey patch ActiveRecord::Base as these are classes. `#lib/active_record_base.rb module ActiveRecord module Base def self.where scope end end` `#app/models/calf.rb class Calf { where.not(status: 'test') }` end So that you can call it as: `calf.last_test_date` Q: Twitter bootstrap / responsive design. What is the best practice to create an accordion with huge responsive area? I have an accordion that works fine from desktop/tablet. The actual section I am applying the accordion on has a huge responsive area due to images and other stuff included. From the case below
